

Appreciation to Reviewers

It is time, once again, to thank all of the reviewers for their advice over the past year. The research reports published in Psychiatric Services are better as a result of the thoughtful recommendations for revision made by our reviewers, and Psychiatric Services is a better journal because of their commitment. The peer-review process is the key to our success as a scholarly publication, and we appreciate the work of the many reviewers who take the time to review. Reviews require considerable time and thought, and each review is appreciated.

We are particularly grateful to those who conduct more than one review during the year. Agreeing to conduct an initial review of a manuscript often leads to one or more reevaluations on the road to its publication. Some reviewers accept our initial invitation three or four times a year. I rarely call upon anyone more than once quarterly—except for members of the editorial board, editorial consultants, and column editors. These individuals produce a great quantity of excellent reviews, both quick reviews in response to a specific question about the appropriateness of a topic or the design of a study and regular reviews, usually two each month in the case of editorial board members. I thank them all for their special efforts as reviewers and for their dedication to the quality of the journal. I also want to express my appreciation to the outstanding editorial staff, who keep the journal moving forward and improve it each month.

HOWARD H. GOLDMAN, M.D., Ph.D., Editor

Note: Because of the copy deadline for the December issue, the reviewers listed below are those who submitted a review between October 1, 2011, and September 30, 2012.

Change of E-Mail Addresses for Authors and Reviewers

Psychiatric Services authors and reviewers are reminded to visit ScholarOne Manuscripts at mc.manuscriptcentral.com/appi-ps and keep the contact information in their user account up to date. Because the system relies on e-mail communication, it is especially important to keep e-mail addresses current. If you have questions about the information in your user account, contact the editorial office at pscentral@psych.org.
