

Appreciation to Reviewers

One of the most pleasurable assignments of my editorship is writing this appreciation. While for the reviewer, the job of reviewing may at times seem onerous and unrewarded, from my standpoint reviewers and reviewing are the bedrock upon which the journal's excellence rests. We take it very much for granted that everything we do is measured and assessed, from hospitals to training programs to grants. In the case of peer-reviewed publications, it's you, the reviewers, the authors' peers, who make the assessments and ensure that our editorial content measures up.

This year you have been facing not only more sophisticated submissions, but also more submissions in evolving areas with a rapidly changing economic-practice landscape. I, along with our editorial board and editorial staff, am extremely grateful for your efforts. Thank you very much for a great year. We hope the next one—our 50th anniversary year—will be just as exciting and fun.
